

Health, Safety, Wellbeing – The Future

Presented by Malcolm Shiels, Head of Health & Safety at Summers-Inman and Chair of the IOSH Construction Board.

As with all professions and industries, the health and safety profession and approach is changing (for the better we hope) otherwise it will stagnate and forever be viewed in too much of a negative light. Gone are the days of someone with a clipboard and pen! What is required today for a health and safety professional to bring real value into the work they do? What should you expect from the health and safety profession in your business and on your projects? Find out the answers to these questions and to take the opportunity to grill Malcolm on the day
